

A close-up, low-angle shot of a medieval knight's arm and torso. The knight is wearing a dark, intricately woven chainmail tunic. A white, padded gambeson sleeve is visible under the armor. The knight's right hand is firmly gripping the hilt of a battle-axe, which has a large, curved, and slightly weathered metal head. In the background, a sword is visible, its blade resting against a dark, heavily worn and scratched metal shield. The shield is covered in numerous small, dark spots, possibly from rust or battle damage. The lighting is dramatic, with strong highlights on the knight's hand and the metal of the weapons, and deep shadows in the folds of the armor and the background. The overall tone is gritty and historical.
